As we stand in silence at the solemn hour of this Armistice Day, the thoughts of the brave men who have died for our country, let us not forget the great strength given to the living by the gallant Allied forces which soon will launch their final offensive of the war, and to the home-front which must not falter in this final moment.

The signals are now fairly set for the Allied offensives in both the European and the Asiatic theaters and the way things are developing are largely to see them go into action. The "don't" necessarily mean that we are to expect the war to open tomorrow, or next week, from tomorrow, for it takes months to prepare for any large-scale operation and especially an amphibious one. However, it can be said that the preliminaries are well advanced.

Actually there probably will be no lull but several months of simultaneous assaults launched in both Europe and Asia. The idea will be to lead off the enemy on as many fronts as possible at the same time to weaken him by dividing his forces. Hitler and Hirohito will be as busy as hounds dog with fear. Indications are that when the day for the big invasion of Western Europe arrives the main coast of France will be supported by thrusts at numerous other points along the coasts of France, the low countries and Norway, though some of these will be feints and won't be developed.

An invasion of Southern France through the Rhone valley may also be expected, bringing a permit to the 300,000 more French soldiers who are waiting feverishly in North Africa for a chance to join the fight for their country. A drive into the Balkans is another contingency. The offensive against the Japanese will be a many pronged affair. The Germans expect it to develop into a vast pincer movement, with the main drive reaching out from Japan from India, in Southeast Asia and from the American Southwest Pacific.

But far more has been mentioned more frequently the main thrust for the offensive under Lord Louis Mountbatten from India. The left claw of the pincer will indeed figure heavily, since it is China back-door to the Japanese, but it would be a mistake to assume that the opening up of Burma alone would solve all the Allied difficulties.

It is quite on the cards that Mountbatten may carry out other major operations. One drive, for instance, is to take the Allied forces across the Malay peninsula and Thailand into French Indo-China.

Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, former British ambassador to Japan, in a recent article in the "New York Times" said that the Japanese strength is on the up-grade. The enemy has not only replaced the planes lost in combat but is improving both the quantity and quality of its air force. Moreover, the pilot training program has been stepped up and is keeping pace with an accelerated production schedule.

A typical division of 15,000 men is about 2,500 motor driven vehicles.

British Loans Stressed in FDR's Report

Washington, Nov. 11 (AP)—President Roosevelt and the British prime minister, Winston Churchill, today laid heavy stress upon the material aid this country has given to the British Empire under "reverse lend-lease," stated the president in his weekly radio address.

The reports followed, but made no specific reference to charges in Congress that U. S. lend-lease constituted "the most colossal waste of all time," and implications on Capitol Hill that this government was bearing a disproportionate share of the war costs, in money and supplies.

Congressional Medal of Honor Is Awarded Colorado Private for Gallantry in Attu Battle

Washington, Nov. 11 (AP)—An army private from Colorado, who led an American battalion to victory in the high, cold, and desolate battle of Attu, Alaska, today was awarded the nation's highest decoration posthumously.

The award of the Congressional Medal of Honor was announced at Secretary of War Department today for the first time of the heroic and gallant action of Joe P. Martinez, 23, of Attu, Colorado, who fell under a hail of Japanese bullets while leading his men in the battle of Attu.

The action occurred last May as the Japanese launched a surprise attack on the Pacific war to smash the American buildup in the Aleutians.
